

4.4 Other Discovery Categories and Mechanisms

The discussion below covers categories of information that may be discoverable under North Carolina law but are not specifically identified in G.S. 15A-903(a)(1) (right to complete files) or G.S. 15A-903(a)(2) (notice of expert and other witnesses). For a discussion of categories of information discoverable under those statutes, see supra § 4.3, Discovery Rights under G.S. 15A-903. See also § 4.5, Brady Material, and § 4.6, Other Constitutional Rights. Counsel should include in discovery requests and motions all pertinent categories of information.

A. Plea Arrangements and Immunity Agreements

G.S. 15A-1054(a) authorizes prosecutors to agree not to try a suspect, to reduce the charges, and to recommend sentence concessions on the condition that the suspect will provide truthful testimony in a criminal proceeding. Prosecutors may enter into such plea arrangements without formally granting immunity to the suspect. G.S. 15A-1054(c) requires the prosecution to give written notice to the defense of the terms of any such arrangement within a reasonable time before any proceeding in which the person is expected to testify.

Some opinions have interpreted the statute to require the State to disclose all plea arrangements with witnesses, regardless with whom made and whether formal or informal. See, e.g., State v. Brooks, 83 N.C. App. 179 (1986) (law enforcement officer told witness he would talk to prosecutor and see about sentence reduction if witness testified against defendant; violation found for failure to disclose this information); State v. Spicer, 50 N.C. App. 214 (1981) (although prosecutor stated there was no agreement, witness stated that he expected prosecutor to drop felonies to misdemeanors; violation found for failure to disclose this information). Other opinions take a narrower view. See, e.g., State v. Crandell, 322 N.C. 487 (1988) (finding that State did not violate statute by failing to disclose plea arrangement with law enforcement agency; statute requires disclosure of plea arrangements entered into by prosecutors); State v. Lowery, 318 N.C. 54 (1986) (statute did not require disclosure because prosecutor had not entered into formal agreement with defendant).

Defense counsel therefore should draft a broad discovery request and motion for such information, including all evidence, documents, and other information concerning all deals, concessions, inducements, and incentives offered to any witness in the case. Counsel should base the request on: (1) the prosecutor's obligation under G.S. 15A-1054(c) to disclose such arrangements; (2) the prosecutor's obligation under G.S. 15A-903(a) to disclose the complete files of the investigation and prosecution of the offenses allegedly committed by the defendant, including oral statements by witnesses (see supra "Oral statements of witness" in § 4.3C, Categories of Information); and (3) the prosecutor's obligation under Brady to disclose impeachment evidence. See Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150, 155 (1972) ("evidence of any understanding or agreement as to a future prosecution would be relevant to . . . credibility"); Boone v. Paderick, 541 F.2d 447 (4th Cir. 1976) (North Carolina conviction vacated on habeas for failure to disclose promise of leniency made by police officer); see also infra § 4.5C, Favorable to Defense (discussing Brady material). In addition to obtaining complete information, a discovery request and motion based on these additional grounds may provide for a greater remedy than specified in G.S. 15A-1054(c)—a recess—if the State fails to turn over the required information. A sample motion to reveal deals or concessions is available in the non-capital motions bank on the IDS website, www.ncids.org.

B. 404(b) Evidence

North Carolina Rule of Evidence 404(b) provides that a defendant’s prior “bad acts” are admissible if offered for a purpose other than to prove his or her character. The prior acts need not have resulted in a conviction.

Before 2004, the discovery statutes did not give defendants the right to discover 404(b) evidence. Defendants argued that North Carolina Rule of Evidence Rule 404(b) mandated that the prosecution give notice of “bad acts” evidence before trial, an argument the courts rejected. See State v. Payne, 337 N.C. 505 (1994). The revised discovery statutes and other grounds provide a basis for disclosure, however:

- If the prosecution intends to use 404(b) evidence against the defendant, the evidence is presumably part of the complete files of the investigation and prosecution of the defendant and so is subject to the State’s general discovery obligations under G.S. 15A-903(a)(1).
- The trial court likely has the inherent authority to require disclosure in the interests of justice. See generally FED. R. EVID. 404(b) & Commentary to 1991 Amendment (recognizing that pretrial notice of such evidence serves to “reduce surprise and promote early resolution on the issue of admissibility”).
- In addition to or in lieu of moving for disclosure of Rule 404(b) evidence, defense counsel may file a motion in limine to preclude admission of such evidence, which may reveal the existence of such evidence as well as limit its use.

A sample motion to disclose evidence of prior bad acts is available in the capital trial motions bank on the IDS website, www.ncids.org.

C. Examinations and Interviews of Witnesses

Examinations. In State v. Horn, 337 N.C. 449 (1994), the court held that a trial judge may not compel a victim or witness to submit to a psychological examination without his or her consent. See also State v. Carter, ___ N.C. App. ___, 718 S.E.2d 687 (2011) (mentioning Horn and finding that defendant presented no authority for argument on appeal that trial court violated his federal and state constitutional rights by refusing to order examination of victim), rev’d on other grounds, ___ N.C. ___, 739 S.E.2d 548 (2013).

Horn held further that a trial judge may grant other relief if the person refuses to submit to a voluntary examination. A judge may appoint an expert for the defense to interpret examinations already performed on the person, deny admission of the State's evidence about the person's condition, and dismiss the case if the defendant's right to present a defense is imperiled. Accordingly, counsel should consider filing a motion requesting that the person submit to an examination. If the person refuses, defense counsel may have grounds for asking for the relief described in Horn.

Additional decisions hold that a judge does not have the authority to order a victim or witness to submit to a physical examination without consent. See State v. Hewitt, 93 N.C. App. 1 (1989) (trial judge may order physical examination only if victim or victim's guardian consents). But see People v. Chard, 808 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1991) (reviewing Hewitt and finding that majority of courts have recognized the authority of trial courts to order a physical examination of the victim on a showing of compelling need).

The defendant's ability to require the State to obtain physical evidence from a victim or witness is also limited. See supra "Physical evidence" in § 4.3C, Categories of Information, and § 4.4F, Nontestimonial Identification Orders. Defendants may inspect and, under appropriate safeguards, test physical evidence already collected by the State. The defendant also may request that the State conduct DNA tests of biological evidence collected by the State. See infra § 4.4E, Biological Evidence.

For a discussion of the State's ability to obtain an examination of a defendant who intends to introduce expert testimony on his or her mental condition, see infra "Insanity and other mental conditions" in § 4.8E, Defenses.

Interviews. The defendant generally does not have the right to compel a witness to submit to an interview. See State v. Phillips, 328 N.C. 1 (1991); State v. Taylor, 178 N.C. App. 395 (2006) (holding under revised discovery statutes that police detective was not required to submit to interview by defense counsel). The State may not, however, instruct witnesses not to talk with the defense. See State v. Pinch, 306 N.C. 1, 11–12 (1982) (obstructing defense access to witnesses may be grounds for reversal of conviction), overruled in part on other grounds by State v. Robinson, 336 N.C. 78 (1994); see also 6 WAYNE R. LAFAYE ET AL., CRIMINAL PROCEDURE § 24.3(h), at 399–401 (3d ed. 2007) [hereinafter LAFAYE, CRIMINAL PROCEDURE] (interpreting Webb v. Texas, 409 U.S. 95 (1972), and other decisions as making it a due process violation for prosecutor to discourage prospective witnesses from testifying for defense).

In limited circumstances, defense counsel may have the right to depose a witness. See infra § 4.4D, Depositions. Courts also have compelled witness interviews for discovery violations. See State v. Hall, 93 N.C. App. 236 (1989) (as sanction for discovery violation, court ordered State's witness to confer with defense counsel and submit to questioning under oath before testifying).

Ethical rules may constrain the ability of defense counsel to interview a child in the absence of a parent or guardian. See KELLA W. HATCHER, JANET MASON & JOHN RUBIN, ABUSE, NEGLECT, DEPENDENCY, AND TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS PROCEEDINGS IN NORTH CAROLINA § 1.4.C.3 (Access to Information and People) (UNC School of Government, 2011) (discussing ethics opinions prohibiting attorney from communicating with child represented by guardian ad litem and from communicating with prosecuting witness who is less than 14 years old in physical or sexual abuse case without consent of parent or guardian), available at <http://sogpubs.unc.edu/electronicversions/pdfs/andtpr.pdf>; see also N.C. State Bar R. Professional Conduct 4.2, 4.3 (interviewing represented and unrepresented witnesses).

D. Depositions

A defendant in a criminal case may take depositions for the purpose of preserving testimony of a person who is infirm, physically incapacitated, or a nonresident of this state. See G.S. 8-74; State v. Barfield, 298 N.C. 306 (1979), disavowed in part on other grounds by State v. Johnson, 317 N.C. 193 (1986).

A defendant may have a further right to take a deposition of a person residing in a state or U.S. territory outside North Carolina. In 2011, the General Assembly added G.S. Chapter 1F, the North Carolina Interstate Depositions and Discovery Act. Its principal purpose was to simplify the procedure for the parties in a civil case in one state to take depositions of witnesses in another state. The pertinent legislation also amended N.C. Rule of Civil Procedure 45, which applies to criminal cases pursuant to G.S. 15A-801 and G.S. 15A-802. Rule 45(f) sets forth the procedure for obtaining discovery, including depositions of a person residing outside North Carolina, and does not exclude criminal cases. If Rule 45(f) applies to criminal cases, a party in a North Carolina criminal case would be able to obtain a deposition (or other discovery) in another state if the state allows such discovery in criminal cases. See N.C. R. Civ. P. 45(f) (requiring party to follow available processes and procedures of jurisdiction where person resides). Rule 45(f) describes the procedure for obtaining a deposition, including obtaining a commission (an order) from a North Carolina court before seeking discovery in the other state.

E. Biological Evidence

G.S. 15A-267(a) gives the defendant a right of access before trial to the following:

- any DNA analysis in the case;
- any biological material that
 - has not been DNA tested
 - was collected from the crime scene, the defendant's residence, or the defendant's property
[the punctuation in the statute makes it unclear whether both of the above conditions must be met or only one]; and
- a complete inventory of all physical evidence connected to the investigation.

G.S. 15A-267(b) states that access to the above is as provided in G.S. 15A-902, the statute on requesting discovery, and as provided in G.S. 15A-952, the statute on pretrial motions. Therefore, counsel should request the above in his or her discovery request and follow up with a motion as necessary. See also G.S. 15A-266.12(d) (State Bureau of Investigation not required to provide the state DNA database for criminal discovery purposes; request to access a person's DNA record must comply with G.S. 15A-902).

On motion of the defendant, the court must order the State to conduct DNA testing of biological evidence it has collected and run a comparison with CODIS (the FBI's combined DNA index system) if the defendant meets the conditions specified in G.S. 15A-267(c). In 2009, the General Assembly amended G.S. 15A-269(c) to make testing mandatory, not discretionary, if the defendant makes the required showing.

In lieu of or in addition to asking for the SBI to conduct DNA testing, the defendant may seek funds for an expert to conduct testing of the evidence. See infra Chapter 5, Experts and Other Assistance. If the defendant does not intend to offer the tests at trial, the defendant generally does not have an obligation to disclose the test results to the State. See infra "Nontestifying experts" in § 4.8C, Results of Examinations and Tests.

Legislative note: G.S. 15A-268 requires agencies with custody of biological evidence to retain the evidence according to the schedule in that statute. Effective June 19, 2013, S.L. 2013-171 (S 630) adds G.S. 20-139.1(h) to require preservation of blood and urine samples subject to a chemical analysis for the period of time specified in that statute and, if a motion to preserve has been filed, until entry of a court order about disposition of the evidence.

F. Nontestimonial Identification Orders

G.S. 15A-271 through G.S. 15A-282 allow the prosecution in some circumstances to obtain a nontestimonial identification order for physical evidence (fingerprints, hair samples, saliva, etc.) from a person suspected of committing a crime. See generally ROBERT L. FARB, ARREST, SEARCH, AND INVESTIGATION IN NORTH CAROLINA 433–36 (UNC School of Government, 4th ed. 2011). The defendant has the right to any report of nontestimonial identification procedures conducted on him or her. See G.S. 15A-282.

In some circumstances a defendant also has the right to request that nontestimonial identification procedures be conducted on himself or herself. See G.S. 15A-281 (specifying conditions for issuance of order). The defendant generally does not have the right to a nontestimonial identification order to obtain physical samples from a third party. See State v. Tucker, 329 N.C. 709 (1991) (defendant could not use nontestimonial identification order to obtain hair sample of possible suspect). But cf. Fathke v. State, 951 P.2d 1226 (Alaska Ct. App. 1998) (court had authority to issue subpoena compelling witness to produce fingerprints, which constitute objects subject to subpoena).

A sample motion for nontestimonial identification procedures to be conducted is in the non-capital motions bank on the IDS website, www.ncids.org.

G. Potential Suppression Issues

Generally. To enable defense counsel to determine whether to file a motion to suppress evidence (under G.S. 15A-971 through G.S. 15-980), counsel should seek discovery of the following (some of which may be in the court file and thus already accessible to counsel and some of which may be a part of the State's investigative and prosecutorial files and thus subject to the State's general discovery obligations under G.S. 15A-903(a)(1)):

- search warrants, arrest warrants, and nontestimonial identification orders issued in connection with the case;
- a description of any property seized from the defendant and the circumstances of the seizure;
- the circumstances of any pretrial identification procedures employed in connection with the alleged crimes (lineups, photo arrays, etc.);
- a description of any communications between the defendant and law-enforcement officers; and
- a description of any surveillance (electronic, visual, or otherwise) conducted of the defendant or others resulting in the interception of any information about the defendant and the offense with which he or she is charged.

Innocence initiatives. In the last several years, the General Assembly has enacted requirements for recording interrogations (G.S. 15A-211) and conducting lineups (G.S. 15A-284.52) as part of an effort to increase the reliability of convictions. For a discussion of these requirements, see infra § 14.3G, Recording of Statements, and § 14.4B, Statutory Requirements for Lineups.

The statutes containing these requirements do not contain specific procedures for discovery, but interrogations and lineups are part of the complete files of the investigation and prosecution and are therefore subject to discovery under G.S. 15A-903(a)(1). Counsel should specifically request the information as part of his or her discovery requests and motions.

Electronic surveillance. G.S. 15A-294(d) through (f) describe a defendant's rights to obtain information about electronic surveillance of him or her. For a further discussion of electronic surveillance and related investigative methods, which is regulated by both state and federal law, see ROBERT L. FARB, ARREST, SEARCH, AND INVESTIGATION IN NORTH CAROLINA 187-96 (UNC School of Government, 4th ed. 2011) and Jeff Welty, Prosecution and Law Enforcement Access to Information about Electronic Communications, ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE BULLETIN No. 2009/05 (Oct. 2009), available at www.sog.unc.edu/pubs/electronicversions/pdfs/aojb0905.pdf.

Chemical analysis results. A person charged with an implied consent offense has a right to a copy of the chemical analysis results the State intends to offer into evidence, whether in district or superior court. The statute, G.S. 20-139.1(e), provides that failure to provide a copy to the defendant before trial is grounds for a continuance but not grounds to suppress the chemical analysis results or dismiss the charges.
